

Steps to take if you are concerned about a pharmacy student's well-being:

1. Privacy- offer to meet with the student privately
2. Listen – determine the source(s) of distress
3. Acknowledge – make sure they know you are listening and understand
4. Show your concern – show empathy toward their concerns
5. Offer to help – “I can help with obtaining resources or other support that you need”
6. If the student wants assistance – “Is it ok if I talk with the Office of Student Affairs or CAPs to get help for you?”

However, if a student mentions or is observed to have:

- Frequent thoughts of death or harming themselves or others (with or without a plan)
- Inability to care for themselves (eat, sleep, grooming/self-care)
- Failure to fulfill obligations at school, work or within personal relationships

THIS IS AN EMERGENCY and a CRISIS and they need immediate help!

- Call 911 if you feel there is an immediate threat to a student's wellbeing.
- If not an immediate threat but still urgent, have student call a CAPS Urgent Care Counselor 858-534-3755 (either with you in the room or on their own). The student will identify as an SSPPS student and describe the situation. The Urgent Care Counselor will set up an appointment either immediately or as they feel is appropriate based on their conversation with the student. The policy is that the student call first prior to walking over to CAPS Urgent Care. However, the walk over is still being honored.
- After business hours (4:00pm-8:00am weekdays, and weekends): call CAPS Crisis Line 858-534-3755. Follow instructions for contacting emergency assistance.
- Contact Associate Dean or Director for Student Affairs to inform them of the situation.
 - Candis Morello - Cmmorello@health.ucsd.edu or Jenna Bastear – Jbastear@health.ucsd.edu
